9 KILOLO KIJAKAZI,

10 Defendant.

Case No. 2:21-cv-00671-NJK

ORDER

[Docket Nos. 17, 19]

11 This case involves judicial review of administrative action by the Commissioner of Social 12 Security (“Commissioner”) denying Plaintiff’s application for disability insurance benefits 13 pursuant to Title II of the Social Security Act. Currently before the Court is Plaintiff’s Motion for 14 Reversal and/or Remand. Docket No. 17. The Commissioner filed a response in opposition and 15 a cross-motion to affirm. Docket No. 19. No reply was filed. See Docket.

16 The parties consent to resolution of this matter by the undersigned magistrate judge. See 17 Docket No. 3; see also Gen. Order 2019-08.

18 I. BACKGROUND

19 A. PROCEDURAL HISTORY

20 On December 18, 2017, Plaintiff filed an application for disability insurance benefits with 21 an onset date of September 30, 2017. See, e.g., Administrative Record (“A.R.”) 223-24. On 22 August 3, 2018, Plaintiff’s claims were initially denied. A.R. 131-34. On December 19, 2018, 23 Plaintiff’s claims were denied on reconsideration. A.R. 142-48. On February 14, 2019, Plaintiff 24 filed a request for a hearing before an administrative law judge. A.R. 149-50. On May 6, 2020, 25 Plaintiff, Plaintiff’s representative, and a vocational expert appeared for a hearing before ALJ John 26 Cusker. See A.R. 41-76. On September 17, 2020, the ALJ issued an unfavorable decision finding 27 that Plaintiff had not been under a disability through the date of the decision. A.R. 18-30. On 28

1 February 22, 2021, the ALJ's decision became the final decision of the Commissioner when the 2 Appeals Council denied Plaintiff's request for review. A.R. 1-6.

3 On April 22, 2021, Plaintiff commenced this action for judicial review. Docket No. 1.

4 B. THE DECISION BELOW

5 The ALJ's decision followed the five-step sequential evaluation process set forth in 20 6 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520 and 416.920 A.R. 18-30. At step one, the ALJ found that Plaintiff met the 7 insured status requirements through December 31, 2020, and has not engaged in substantial gainful 8 activity since the alleged onset date. A.R. 20. At step two, the ALJ found that Plaintiff has the 9 following severe impairments: vascular insult to the brain, spine disorders, dysfunction – major 10 joints, disorders of the back - discogenic and degenerative, carpal tunnel syndrome, depressive 11 bipolar and related disorders, and anxiety and obsessive-compulsive disorders. A.R. 21. At step 12 three, the ALJ found that Plaintiff does not have an impairment or combination of impairments 13 that meets or medically equals the severity of one of the listed impairments in 20 C.F.R. Part 404, 14 Subpart P, Appendix 1. A.R. 21-23. The ALJ found that Plaintiff has the residual functional 15 capacity to 16 perform a range of light work as defined in 20 CFR 404.1567(b):

 17 She can lift and/or carry 20 pounds occasionally and 10 pounds 18 frequently. She can sit, stand and/or walk for about 6 hours each in 19 an 8 hour workday, with normal breaks. She cannot climb ladders, 20 ropes and/or scaffolds, or balance; she can occasionally climb ramps 21 and/or stairs, stoop, kneel crouch, and crawl. She can occasionally handle, finger, and feel with both hands. She must avoid exposure to heavy machinery, unprotected heights and commercial driving, and avoid concentrated extreme cold and extreme heat. She can perform simple, and some detailed tasks in a well-spaced work setting.

22 A.R. 23-24. See also A.R. 24-28. At step four, the ALJ found Plaintiff is unable to perform past 23 relevant work as a risk insurance manager and administrative analyst. A.R. 28. At step five, the 24 ALJ found that jobs exist in significant numbers in the national economy that Plaintiff can perform 25 based on her age, education, work experience, and residual functional capacity. A.R. 28-30. In 26 doing so, the ALJ defined Plaintiff as a younger individual aged 18-49 at the time of the alleged 27 disability onset date, and as having at least a high school education. A.R. 28. The ALJ found the 28

1 transferability of job skills to be immaterial. A.R. 28. The ALJ considered the Medical-Vocational 2 Rules, which provide a framework for finding Plaintiff not disabled, along with vocational expert 3 testimony that an individual with the same residual functional capacity and vocational factors 4 could perform work as a furniture rental clerk, dealer accounts investigator, and laminating 5 machine off bearer. A.R. 28-30.

6 Based on all of these findings, the ALJ found Plaintiff not disabled through the date of the 7 decision. A.R. 30.

8 II. MERITS ARGUMENT

9 This case involves two overarching issues: (1) whether remand is required in light of 10 constitutional concerns regarding the tenure of former Commissioner Andrew Saul and (2) 11 whether the ALJ erred by denying benefits without substantial evidence to support his 12 determination of Plaintiff's mental residual functioning capacity. The Court will address the latter 13 merits contention first. Cf. United States v. Raines, 362 U.S. 17, 22 (1960) (addressing preference 14 against "unnecessary pronouncements on constitutional issues").

15 A. STANDARDS

16 The standard for determining disability is whether a social security claimant has an 17 "inability to engage in any substantial gainful activity by reason of any medically determinable 18 physical or mental impairment which can be expected . . . to last for a continuous period of not 19 less than 12 months." 42 U.S.C. § 423(d)(1)(A); see also 42 U.S.C. § 1382c(3)(A). The disability 20 determination is made by following a five-step sequential evaluation process. Bowen v. Yuckert, 21 482 U.S. 137, 140 (1987) (citing 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520, 416.920). The first step addresses 22 whether the claimant is currently engaging in substantial gainful activity. 20 C.F.R. §§ 23 404.1520(b), 416.920(b). When an individual is pursuing a claim under Title II, the claimant must 24 also meet insurance requirements. 20 C.F.R. § 404.130. The second step addresses whether the 25 claimant has a medically determinable impairment that is severe or a combination of impairments 26 that significantly limits basic work activities. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(c), 416.920(c). The third 27 step addresses whether the claimant's impairments or combination of impairments meet or 28 medically equal the criteria of an impairment listed in 20 C.F.R. Part 404, Subpart P, Appendix 1.

1 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(d), 404.1525, 404.1526, 416.920(d), 416.925, 416.926. There is then a 2 determination of the claimant's residual functional capacity, which assesses the claimant's ability 3 to do physical and mental work-related activities. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(e), 416.920(e). The 4 fourth step addresses whether the claimant has the residual functional capacity to perform past 5 relevant work. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(f), 416.920(f). The fifth step addresses whether the 6 claimant is able to do other work considering the residual functional capacity, age, education, and 7 work experience. 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1520(g), 416.920(g).

8 After exhausting the administrative process, a claimant may seek judicial review of a 9 decision denying social security benefits. 42 U.S.C. § 405(g). The Court must uphold a decision 10 denying benefits if the proper legal standard was applied and there is substantial evidence in the 11 record as a whole to support the decision. Webb v. Barnhart, 433 F.3d 683, 686 (9th Cir. 2005).
 12 Substantial evidence is "more than a mere scintilla," which equates to "such relevant evidence as 13 a reasonable mind might accept as adequate to support a conclusion." Biestek v. Berryhill, ____ 14 U.S. ___, 139 S.Ct. 1148, 1154 (2019). "[T]he threshold for such evidentiary sufficiency is not 15 high." Id.

16        B. ANALYSIS

17 Plaintiff raises a single merits issue on appeal. Plaintiff submits that the ALJ did not 18 incorporate Dr. Short's opinions about Plaintiff's moderate limitations in interacting with others 19 properly into the mental residual functional capacity determination. Docket No. 17 at 10-12.
 20 Plaintiff submits that the mental residual functional capacity determination does not adequately 21 encompass this moderate limitation, which would impede her ability to carry out the alternative 22 jobs highlighted by the ALJ's Medical-Vocational Rules analysis. Id. at 11-12. In response, the 23 Commissioner submits that the ALJ properly considered this opined limitation, which is not a clear 24 functional limitation, and appropriately included it in the residual functional capacity by 25 incorporating it into a limitation as "simple and some detailed tasks in a well-spaced work setting."
 26 Docket No. 19 at 13-21. The Commissioner has the better argument.

27        The residual functional capacity is what an individual can do despite her "physical, mental, 28 nonexertional, or other limitations." Cooper v. Sullivan, 880 F.2d 1152, 1155 n.5 (9th Cir. 1989)

1 (citing 20 C.F.R. § 404.1545). In making this determination, the ALJ considers all relevant 2 evidence, including residual functional capacity determinations made by consultative examiners, 3 agency experts, and other doctors. See 20 C.F.R. §§ 404.1513(c), 404.1545(a)(3), 416.913(c), 4 416.945(a)(3). The residual functional capacity determination does not need to copy the exact 5 opinion of any particular doctor, but “the ALJ is responsible for translating and incorporating 6 clinical findings into a succinct” residual functional capacity. Rounds v. Commissioner, 795 F.3d 7 1177, 1185-86 (9th Cir. 2015), as amended 807 F.3d 996, 1006 (9th Cir. 2015).

8 The ALJ must give sufficient weight to “subjective aspects of a doctor’s opinion.”
 9 Rodriguez v. Bowen, 876 F.2d 759, 762 (9th Cir. 1989) (citing Embrey v. Bowen, 849 F.2d 418, 10 422 (9th Cir. 1988) and Valencia v. Heckler, 751 F.2d 1082, 1085 (9th Cir. 1985)). A doctor’s 11 ultimate conclusion on limitations can be disregarded if the ALJ sets forth specific and legitimate 12 reasons for doing so, supported by substantial evidence.” See Revels v. Berryhill, 874 F.3d 648, 13 654-55 (9th Cir. 2017) (citing Magallanes v. Bowen, 881 F.2d 747, 751 (9th Cir. 1989)). If a 14 physician’s opinion is “premised to a large extent upon the claimant’s own account of [her] 15 symptoms and limitations,” it may be disregarded where those complaints have been “properly 16 discounted.” Fair v. Bowen, 885 F.2d 597, 605 (9th Cir. 1989) (citing Brawner v. Secretary of 17 Health and Human Servs., 839 F.2d 432, 433-34 (9th Cir. 1988)). If a claimant can spend a 18 substantial part of her day performing functions that are transferable to a work setting, “a specific 19 finding as to this fact may be sufficient to discredit an allegation” of a disabling limitation. Id. at 20 603.

21 Plaintiff has failed to demonstrate that she is entitled to a remand based on the failure of 22 the ALJ to properly consider and weigh Dr. Short’s conclusions and opinions. Plaintiff faults the 23 ALJ for recognizing Dr. Short’s perspective, but not giving weight to his opinion that Plaintiff 24 would have moderate difficulty interacting with supervisors, peers, and the public. See Docket 25 No. 17 at 11. Plaintiff’s briefing, however, merely makes a bare assertion that the ALJ should 26 have incorporated Dr. Short’s opinion into the mental residual functional capacity determination.
 27 Id. at 10-12. She fails to develop her argument undermining the ALJ’s decision making process 28

1 or point to contrary evidence in the record supporting a different conclusion from the available
 2 record. See id. Nonetheless, Plaintiff's argument is belied by the record.

3 The Commissioner argues that Dr. Short's limitation and opinions were properly 4 incorporated into the mental residual functional capacity determination. Docket No. 19 at 18-19.
 5 The Commissioner further argues that Dr. Short's limitations were interpreted by the agency 6 consultants in their residual functional capacity recommendations and the ALJ specifically adopted 7 those recommendations of including the limitation of "simple, and some detailed tasks in a well-8 spaced work setting" after finding that the limitation was supported by the record and properly 9 explaining why more restrictive residual functional capacity was not imposed. Id. at 19-21.

10 The Court finds that, in his determination of Plaintiff's mental residual functional capacity, 11 the ALJ explicitly considered Dr. Short's opinion and gave it weight. A.R. 26-27. He discussed 12 at length Dr. Short's assessment, including his consideration of Plaintiff's history as reported by 13 her in his evaluation of her. A.R. 22, 26-27. The ALJ also considered and gave weight to the 14 opinions of two state agency consultants, Dr. Kotler and Dr. Dr. Patterson. A.R. 27-28. Both Dr.
 15 Kotler and Dr. Patterson incorporated Dr. Short's opinions and examination into their 16 recommendations and conclusions. A.R. 96, 100, 104, 112-13, 119, 121, 123, 127. The ALJ
 17 discounted the severity of the mental limitations by specifically considering the daily activities 18 Plaintiff reported being able participate in, including social activities, and the treatment notes 19 submitted as evidence describing Plaintiff as "pleasant" and "cooperative". A.R. 23-28. In 20 considering all these opinions and the available record, the ALJ determined that Plaintiff had only 21 a mild limitation in interacting with others and accordingly limited the mental residual functional 22 capacity to "simple and some detailed tasks in a well-spaced work setting." A.R. 24.

23 The Court finds that the ALJ thoughtfully considered not only the expert opinions and 24 limitations submitted from Drs. Short, Kotler, and Patterson, but also weighed them alongside the 25 available evidence, including Plaintiff's testimony and her treatment records. A.R. 21-28.
 26 Plaintiff's treatment records consistently report her as being pleasant and cooperative. See, e.g.
 27 A.R. 361, 550, 572, 911, 1618, 1628, 2243. While Plaintiff did report some anxiety and depression 28 impacting her ability to interact with others, the records, including Dr. Short's assessment,

1 indicated that these conditions are manageable when Plaintiff is compliant with her medication.
 2 See, e.g., A.R. 899, 902, 904. The record also shows a range of daily activities, including going 3 to public places both alone and with others, playing games with her family, and interacting with 4 people on the Internet or phone, which cuts against a finding of a more severe mental residual 5 functional capacity. A.R. 61-62, 65, 121, 287, 289-90, 902. The Court finds that the ALJ properly
 6 weighed the contrary evidence against the moderate limitation opined by Dr. Short and Plaintiff's 7 asserted limitations in interacting with others when determining Plaintiff's mental residual 8 functional capacity. Further, the Court finds that the ALJ's determination of Plaintiff's mental 9 residual functional capacity is supported by substantial evidence.

10 Accordingly, Plaintiff is not entitled to a remand based on her merits-based argument.

11 III. CONSTITUTIONAL ARGUMENT

12 Having determined that remand is not warranted based on the merits-based argument 13 presented, the Court turns to Plaintiff's constitutional challenge.<sup>1</sup> Plaintiff argues that she is 14 entitled to relief on appeal because the tenure of the Commissioner of Social Security heading the 15 agency at the time of her denial of benefits was unconstitutional in that he could not be removed 16 by the President without cause. Docket No. 17 at 6-10.<sup>2</sup> The Commissioner counters that,

18 <sup>1</sup> The Court notes at the outset a procedural defect in that Plaintiff did not plead a 19 constitutional violation in her complaint filed with this Court. See Docket No. 1-1. Pursuant to 20 the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, a complaint must contain a "short and plain statement of the 21 claim showing that the pleader is entitled to relief." Fed. R. Civ. P. 8(a)(2); see also Montoya v.
22 Colvin, No. 2:16-cv-00454-RFB-NJK, 2016 WL 890922, at *1-3 (D. Nev. Mar. 8, 2016) (applying 23 Rule 8 in the Social Security context). Moreover, that an unpled claim is later presented through argument in substantive briefing is insufficient to preserve the claim. See Navajo Nation v. U.S.
Forest Serv., 535 F.3d 1058, 1080 (9th Cir. 2008). Hence, it appears Plaintiff waived her 24 constitutional argument by not pleading it. See, e.g., John R. v. Comm'r of Soc. Sec., No. C20-25 6176-MLP, 2021 WL 5356719, at *5 (W.D. Wash. Nov. 16, 2021). As the Commissioner did not 26 raise this waiver issue, however, the Court will address the constitutional argument on its merits.

27 <sup>2</sup> This is one of several constitutional issues that has been percolating within the 28 administrative law realm in recent years, adding importance to being clear as to what Plaintiff is not arguing. Most significantly, Plaintiff is not arguing that the ALJ was improperly appointed by then-Acting Commissioner Berryhill. See Docket No. 17 at 6-10. As such, this case does not involve an appointments challenge like those raised in Lucia v. S.E.C., 138 S. Ct. 2044 (2018) or Carr v. Saul, 141 S.Ct. 1352 (2021). This distinction is of particular importance because an appointment violation is remedied with a new hearing before a properly appointed official. Lucia, 138 S.Ct. at 2055. For the reasons discussed below, relief is not provided as a matter of course with respect to the "tenure" issue that Plaintiff is relying upon in this case. See Collins v. Yellen, U.S. ___, 141 S.Ct. 1761, 1788 (2021) (distinguishing Lucia).

1 regardless of whether the tenure of the previous Commissioner was unconstitutional, Plaintiff has 2 not established a sufficient nexus between the constitutional infirmity and her denial of benefits to 3 warrant relief. Docket No. 19 at 9-11. The Court agrees with the Commissioner.

4       A.     CONSTITUTIONAL VIOLATION

5       The Social Security Independence and Program Improvements Act of 1994 provides that 6 the Social Security Administration is a component within the United States Department of Health 7 and Human Services that will act as an “independent agency in the executive branch of the 8 Government.” 42 U.S.C. § 901(a). The Act provides further that the Commissioner is “appointed 9 for a term of 6 years” and “may be removed from office only pursuant to a finding by the President 10 of neglect of duty or malfeasance in office.” 42 U.S.C. § 902(a)(3). The Supreme Court has held 11 in other contexts that similar tenure protections violate separation of powers principles and, 12 consequently, are unconstitutional. See Collins, 141 S.Ct. at 1783-87 (holding that the tenure 13 protection at the Federal Housing Finance Agency is unconstitutional); see also Seila Law LLC v.
 14 Consumer Fin. Prot. Bureau, ____ U.S. ____, 140 S.Ct. 2183, 2197-2207 (2020) (same for 15 Consumer Financial Protection Bureau). The current Commissioner concedes that the tenure 16 protection specific to the Social Security Administration is likewise unconstitutional, see Docket 17 No. 19 at 6; see also Constitutionality of the Commissioner of Social Security’s Tenure Protection, 18 2021 WL 2981542 (O.L.C. July 8, 2021), and other courts have reached the same conclusion, see, 19 e.g., Lisa Y. v. Comm’r of Soc. Sec., ____ F. Supp. 3d ____, 2021 WL 5177363, at *5 (W.D. Wash.
 20 Nov. 8, 2021).

21       B.     ENTITLEMENT TO RELIEF

22       That the protected tenure provision violates constitutional separation-of-powers principles 23 does not end the analysis, however. In addition to determining that a protected tenure position is 24 constitutionally defective, the Supreme Court made clear that such a provision is severable from 25 the other governing statutes for the agency. Seila Law, 140 S.Ct. at 2209, 2245.<sup>3</sup> That a party was 26
 27

28       <sup>3</sup> Although the Supreme Court has not specifically addressed severability in the Social Security context, other courts have determined that the pertinent removal clause is similarly severable. Shaun A. v. Comm’r of Soc. Sec., No. C21-5003-SKV, 2021 WL 5446878, at *4 (W.D.

1 somehow impacted by an action or decision of an agency that suffers from this type of “tenure”
 2 violation does not mean that the action or decision was void or that the party is entitled to judicial 3 relief. See Collins, 141 S.Ct. at 1788. To create an entitlement to relief, the claimant must show 4 that the “unconstitutional provision [] inflict[ed] compensable harm.” Id. at 1788. Hence, the 5 aggrieved party must establish a “link” between the adverse action and the unconstitutional tenure-6 protection provision. Decker Coal Co. v. Pehringer, 8 F.4th 1123, 1138 (9th Cir. 2021); see also 7 Collins, 141 S.Ct. at 1788-89 (providing example of infliction of compensable harm).

8 Social Security claimants appealing a denial of benefits face an uphill battle in trying to 9 establish the necessary link to obtain relief based on the unconstitutional removal provision. As 10 explained by Justice Kagan, this constitutional violation is unlikely to lead to relief in the lion’s 11 share of social security appeals because, “[w]hen an agency decision would not capture a 12 President’s attention, his removal authority could not make a difference.” Collins, 141 S.Ct. at 13 1802 (Kagan, J. concurring). The nature of appellate review in the social security context provides 14 a further hurdle for claimants raising this argument:

15 Even assuming § 902(a)(3)’s removal clause prevented former 16 President Trump from removing Commissioner Saul and 17 confirming a different Commissioner, there is no possibility § 18 902(a)(3) harmed plaintiff, because the final decision of the 19 Commissioner that is before this Court for review is the ALJ’s 20 decision.... [T]he Court has reviewed the record and the ALJ’s 21 decision at issue and concludes that the ALJ did not err, and that the 22 case should be affirmed for these reasons. Had the Court found 23 otherwise and determined that the ALJ’s decision was not supported by substantial evidence or free of legal error, the Court would have reversed the Commissioner’s final decision. Hence, the Court reaches its decision to reverse or affirm the Commissioner’s final decision notwithstanding the existence of § 902(a)(3)’s removal clause, who the Commissioner was at the time the decision became final, or what directives the Commissioner may have given the ALJ.
 The Court thus concludes that there is no possibility § 902(a)(3)’s removal clause harmed plaintiff in this case.

 25 Dec. 6, 2021); see also Brinkman v. Kijakazi, No. 2:21-cv-00528-EJY, 2021 WL 4462897, at *2 26 (D. Nev. Sept. 29, 2021) (“Plaintiff has not shown that whether the President could remove the 27

28 Wash. Nov. 22, 2021) (“if the removal clause in § 902(a)(3) is stricken, the SSA remains fully functional”). The Court agrees.

1 SSA Commissioner without limitations . . . impacted the independence of the ALJ or his decision 2 in Plaintiff's case. It is well settled that the ALJ must exercise his independent judgment on the 3 evidence before him" (internal quotations and citations omitted)). As Justice Kagan predicted in 4 her concurrence, relief is routinely denied to social security appellants raising this argument within 5 the Ninth Circuit. See, e.g., Sarah H., 2021 WL 5770269, at *5; Frank W. v. Kijakazi, No.

16 Justice Kagan proved prescient for purposes of this case, too. Plaintiff has not identified 17 any link between the ALJ's adverse decision and the unconstitutional removal provision. Plaintiff 18 instead conflates the Supreme Court's jurisprudence as to unconstitutional tenure protection with 19 its jurisprudence as to unconstitutional appointments. See Docket No. 17 at 9 (citing Lucia, 138 20 S.Ct. at 2055). The Supreme Court has made clear that the mere existence of unconstitutional 21 tenure protection is not grounds for relief and, in so doing, explicitly distinguished the case law on 22 which Plaintiff now relies for her contrary position. Collins, 141 S.Ct. at 1788 (distinguishing 23 Lucia). Moreover, Plaintiff has not put forward any showing at all that former President Trump 24 would have removed Commissioner Saul and appointed a new Commissioner who would have 25 administered this Plaintiff's claims any differently. See Sarah H., 2021 WL 5770269, at *5.

26 Accordingly, Plaintiff has not shown an entitlement to relief arising out of the 27 unconstitutionality of the Social Security Commissioner's tenure-protection provision. See also

1 IV. CONCLUSION

2 Based on the forgoing, the Court DENIES the motion for reversal or remand (Docket No.
3 17) and GRANTS the countermotion to affirm (Docket No. 19). The decision below is 4 AFFIRMED. The Clerk's Office is instructed to ENTER FINAL JUDGMENT accordingly and 5 to CLOSE this case.

6 IT IS SO ORDERED.
